Australian Research Council
Key Centre in Transport
Management

About Us

In less than 60 years since it was established in 1958, Monash University has developed an enviable international reputation for the strength of its research and education programs. It is ranked in the top 100 universities in the world and is Australia's largest university with about 60,000 students and 250,000 alumni.

The transport group at Monash was established in 1969. Monash University is ranked number one in the world in the field of transportation according to the Centre for World University Rankings. The Institute of Transport Studies, the Australian Research Council Key National Centre of Excellence in Teaching and Research in Transport Management, was established in 1995. For more than five decades the transport group at Monash has played a crucial role in the transport field through fundamental, applied and industry-relevant research and education. Through our excellent education programs we continue to educate transportation leaders for industry, government and academia.

Our education and research programs reach from the Clayton campus in Melbourne, Australia to the Kuala Lumpur Campus of Monash Malaysia and to the Monash-South East University Joint Graduate School located in Suzhou, China. Monash ITS brings together 20 academic and professional staff with more than 150 Masters and PhD students.

Monash ITS aims to progress transport knowledge and practice to contribute to the prosperity and sustainability of industry and the wider community. Consider engaging with Monash ITS as either a research partner or as a student to help us address the challenge of sustaining mobility and contribute to the enhanced liveability of our cities.
