CLARS Law & Business Seminar Series:

The emergence of 'comply or explain' as a global model for corporate governance codes

ABOUT THIS EVENT

The introduction of the Cadbury Code in the UK in the early 1990s marked an important turning point in the evolution of corporate governance around the world.

The 'comply or explain' approach pioneered by the Cadbury Code prioritised flexibility and the role of market discipline in its approach. These priorities can be linked clearly to earlier trends in the evolution of company law and capital market regulation in the UK. However, it is more difficult to explain why the Cadbury Code should have exerted so much influence over systems of corporate governance which differ from the UK in their approach and evolution.

Professor MacNeil will discuss the adoption of 'comply or explain' codes around the world, and consider three possible explanations for their growing popularity from a regulatory perspective.

Professor MacNeil's visit is funded by the UNSW Business School Distinguished Scholar Award 2020.
